

Dear Student of the English and American Studies BA training programme,

In the case of certain training programmes, the curriculum prescribes a 50-credit curriculum block, which in the English and American Studies BA training programme can be either a Specialization module OR a Minor.

For English and American Studies BA you are required to choose a so-called Study track as well, which is a 25-credit curriculum block.

Both the Specialization module/Minor and the Study track are essentially an in-department training program where the student can deepen their studies in a given topic within a pre-determined credit value. The module selection procedure, like the course registration, takes place in Neptun. After logging in choose the Administration menu, then Module selection.

Students who choose the specialization Literatures and Cultures in English can only choose one of these two study tracks: English Linguistics OR English Applied Linguistics. The prerequisite for starting the study track is the successful completion of the English Proficiency Exam.

English and American Studies BA students can choose between the following Specialization modules or Minors:

- Literatures and Cultures in English specialization– 50 credits
- Germanic Studies (German) [GNEMANBN232401] minor – 50 credits

- Specialization or Minor module (50 credits) – You must currently choose one of the above listed Specialization modules. This will be the main focus of your studies.
