

Dear Student of the International Relations MA training programme,

In the case of certain training programmes, the curriculum prescribes a 30-credit curriculum block, which in the International Relations MA training programme, called a Specialization module.

The Specialization module/Minor are essentially an in-department training program where the student can deepen their studies in a given topic within a pre-determined credit value. The module selection procedure, like the course registration, takes place in Neptun. After logging in choose the Administration menu, then Module selection.

International Relations MA students can choose between the following Specialization modules or Minors:

- European Studies [EUTRANMA171801] specialization – 50 credits
- Regional and Civilization Studies [RECRANMA171801] specializations – 50 credits

Some modules may have a special entry requirement or an application interview.

For detailed information about the offered minors and their requirements, please visit the Faculty website here.

We suspect this might be a bit confusing, but we'll try to outline the structure of the curriculum for you, and we'll also attach the curriculum of your training programme itself.

- Core subjects (81 credits) – Foundation subjects that everyone, regardless of specialisation, should complete.
- Specialization module (30 credits) – You must currently choose one of the above listed Specialization modules. This will be the main focus of your studies.
- Electives (9 credits) - You need to complete a total of 10 credits of electives throughout your studies. Any course you complete that is not compulsory in your curriculum is counted as an elective.

Application period: 15 - 26 April 2023.

Admission is decided by the departments.

Kind regards,

Registrar's Office
